Sessom Open as Crews Repair Water Line

Sessom Drive is open Monday as road crews completed temporary repairs on the street following a 12-inch water line break Saturday.

City water utility crews restored water flow to a 12-inch water line shortly after 8 p.m. Sunday after a main break late Saturday disrupted service and closed Sessom Drive between Peques and N. LBJ Drive.

Residents of Tree House Apartments, the Chautauqua Center and the Physical Plant at Texas State University were without water for most of Sunday after the main broke about 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

A boil water advisory was expected to be issued to affected customers due to the loss of water pressure until the water can be tested.

Sessom is a major roadway serving the Texas State University campus. The 12-inch main was encased in concrete, making it difficult for crews to find the extent of the line fracture, said Jon Clack, Assistant Director of Public Services, Water/ Wastewater Utility.
